SYLLABUS

1. COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course teaches the basic principles of “bridging” from biblical exegesis to expository preaching, as well as the practical steps by which to develop the constituent parts of a sermon’s content. Consideration is also given to the basic principles which guide the effective delivery of the sermon. Opportunities are provided for each student to practice the principles and skills taught. This course assumes that the student already has the exegetical and hermeneutical skills which are taught in Interpreting Scripture for Preaching and Teaching (PR601).

2. COURSE OBJECTIVES

* Upon completion of this course, the student should be able to:

Describe and practice a step-by-step procedure for the construction of an expository message.

Give evidence of the development of practical skills in the preparation and delivery of an expository sermon.

Sympathetically and constructively evaluate the expository preaching of other persons, as well as his/her own efforts.

Written Work:

Prepare two expository messages, following the exegetical and expository method taught in the class.

- The first message is to be from a passage from the New Testament epistles (Romans to Jude) which the student has neither studied extensively nor preached before.
- The second message may be taken from any other genre of scripture.
- * The written material to be submitted is due on the day each student preaches.
- * Written material must be submitted in word processed form.
- * The written material must include the following four separate sections (please note: submit these as separate and distinct units):

A. A complete set of exegetical notes on the passage (not to exceed ten pages), which must include:

A complete record of your own work using each of the exegetical steps taught previously in Interpreting Scripture for Preaching and Teaching (PR601) and reviewed in this class.

B. A complete set of homiletical notes on the passage which must include:

(1)The rough draft (i.e., the sheets of scratch paper or rough word-processed work) working through of the exegetical big idea, the homiletical big idea, and the main points of the message.

(2)The final form of the exegetical big idea, the homiletical big idea, and the main points; and a defense, if needed, of why these final forms are the best statements out of the earlier ideas developed in the rough draft process.

(3)A statement of the purpose and desired response to the message, and a statement of the strategy used in the message to accomplish this purpose.

 Note: The message will be addressed to fellow students in seminary; this is the audience toward which you will focus your messages, not a hypothetical audience.*

(4)An analysis of a contemporary issue, need, question, etc., to which in the student's judgment, this passage speaks, and a brief rationale for this connection. (one paragraph total) This is a more reflective and subjective section.

C. A complete message outline for the passage which must be typed and follow the format and style presented in class

(1) A message title.

(2) A word-for-word text for the introduction of the message. Include in it where you state the homiletical big idea, identified with the letters HBI.

(3) A detailed outline for the message, including points, sub-points, explanations, illustrations, and major transition statements.

(4) A word-for-word text for the conclusion of the message.

Preaching:

Preach the previously prepared expository messages in no more than 20 minutes to the rest of the class.

- * A preaching schedule will be developed during the first part of the course.
- * Students will arrive in class on the day designated for their preaching in sufficient time to be fully prepared at the opening of class. Students will also supply a means of digital recording (audio and video) so that their preaching can be reviewed.

Evaluation: Contribute to and receive the written and oral evaluation of the expository messages preached by yourself and other class members.

- * Evaluation sheets will be provided for this purpose.

Submit a written evaluation of your own message after being viewed on videotape by yourself outside of class time.

- * Evaluation sheets will be provided for this purpose

- * Each student will provide for their own preaching to be videotaped for their own review.
- * While not given a separate mark, failure to complete this written evaluation will result in the lowering of a student's final grade or an "incomplete" for the final grade

Reading:

Read and digest 600 pages from recommended texts and submit a statement of the books read, the number of pages and the overall impact of the reading on the student. Students may consult with the instructor concerning books not on the recommended list.

COURSE EVALUATION

The division of marks is as follows:

Participation and reading	10%
First message's written material	30%
First message's oral delivery	15%
Second message's written material	30%
Second message's oral delivery	15%

The marks assigned will be based on the clarity, rigor, and completeness with which the course requirements are met.

The letter grades given are explained in the Ambrose Seminary Catalogue.

Students should understand that both objective achievement and improvement of skill will be taken into account in assigning marks.

Unless a calculating error has been made in a mark, students who request that a mark be reconsidered must realize that this involves a re-evaluation of the work, and so may result in raising, lowering or confirming a mark.

- * See the Ambrose Seminary Catalogue for an explanation of the procedures in such a case.

5. COURSE POLICIES

Late assignments:

All assignments are due the beginning of the class period on the date due. All Written work is due at the beginning of the class in which the student preaches.

Any alterations in preaching schedule will be arranged between individual students, and the instructor notified one week in advance. The instructor will not arrange such alterations.

Format for all written material:

All written material must be submitted in word-processed form.

If any written piece of work does not conform to any of the guidelines in this syllabus, it will be returned to the student to be redone.

- * The grade of a piece of work returned to the student will be dropped in conformity with late-paper regulations.
- * There will be a limited period of time allowed for resubmission of the written assignment.
