Course Description

Wordsworth's and Coleridge's Lyrical Ballads (1798) began the Romantic period in English literature, a period that witnessed changes to the perception of the role of the artists and art, the effects of which are still experienced today. The Romantic phenomenon continued for the next four decades; the works of the above two poets, as well as those of Byron, P.B. Shelley, and Keats, and several lesser-known writers will be studied in the context of the diverse historical, social, intellectual, and artistic climate of the period.

Expected Learning Outcomes

1. Students will learn about the Romantic period in English literature.
2. Students will gain analytical and critical tools for readings in Romantic literature and writing essays about this remarkable period.
3. Students will learn more advanced presentation and writing skills than in former 100- and 200-level courses.

Because of the nature of the Alpha 4.00 system, there can be no uniform University-wide conversion scale. The relationship between raw scores (e.g. percentages) and the resultant letter grade will depend on the nature of the course and the instructor’s assessment of the level of each class, compared to similar classes taught previously.

Please note that final grades will be available on student registration system. Printed grade sheets are not mailed out.

Any attempt to obtain credit for academic work through fraudulent, deceptive, or dishonest means is academic dishonesty. Plagiarism involves presenting someone else's ideas, words, or work as one's own. Plagiarism is fraud and theft, but plagiarism can also occur by accident when a student fails or forgets to acknowledge to another person's ideas or words. Plagiarism and cheating can result in a failing grade for an assignment, for the course, or immediate dismissal from the university. Students are expected to be familiar with the policies in the current Academic Calendar that deal with plagiarism, cheating, and the penalties and procedures for dealing with these matters. All cases of academic dishonesty are reported to the Academic Dean and become part of the student's permanent record.
